From the Herald and Presbyter. The Kindling of Church Love.

It ought not to be forgotten that Church-membership imposes obligation. The Master says: "Go work to day in my vineyard." He places one, two, five or ten talents in the hand of every one, and says: "Occupy; employ this well until I come." The range of activity is so wide that every one can find something to do, and it is wonderful how the doing of something elicits interest and kindles thing elicits interest and kindles Church love. Monday afternoon he climbed up three flights of stairs, en H. Street, and upon knocking at the door he heard a faint voice say: "Come in." He walked in upon the bare floor and found two occupants, the one a little girl with hollow, famished cheeks and red eyes, and the other the child's mother, lying on a poorly furnished bed, Lurning up with fever. The little one said that she had not been able to get a bite for either of them all that day. Working for a Soul.

Not for souls. But for a soul. Only one. One at a time. Not by wholesale, but individually. Not indefinite souls in Africa or New Zealand, but one soul in your own family, in your circle, in your community. Work for a soul. Dr. Cuyler tells us of a warmhearted lawyer in his Church who made up his mind to work for the conversion of a certain infidel in the congregation. He went to work deliberately. He was patient and persistent. He did not lack faith or wisdom, he was kind and gentle. His yearning after the soul of his friend brought a rare degree of Christlikeness to his own life. After awhile the infidel said to him in a half jest, "Mr. J—, you would better give me up as a hard case, and try somebody else." But the soul-hungry lawyer did not give up his friend. He gave himself all the more to his self-appointed work, and he did not cease his praying and working until his the more to his self-appointed work, and he did not cease his praying and working until his conversion of a certain infidel in the Let that one soul be constanly in your thoughts, in your prayers, in your plans. And it may be rule and rigidly adhere to it. We shall rever here the time to read at least a purpose. Let that one soul be constanly in your thoughts, in your prayers, in your plans. And it may be that, sooner than you think for God will grant you your heart's desire. One soul. Not a score. Only one. Pray for one. Plead for one. Work for one. Live for one.—The Epworth Herald.

The man of the world can read his newspaper on the cars; if we are as much interested in the Bible as he is in the daily news, we shall be able to read a chapter on a railroad train. And if it is always in mind, we shall find no day too short to read a lesson from the Scriptures.

Once a friend, always a friend Most of us are ready to apply this truth to one who claims to be our friend; but we are not so ready to apply it to ourselves as a test of our friendship. If we claim to be a true friend to another, our friendship-love ought not to pivot on his fidelity, but on ours. Even though he fails us, we ought not to fail him or fail ourselves. If we were ever his friend, we shall ever be his friend. Nothing that be does or fails to do, ought to cause us to be untrue.

(A. R. Presbyterian.) It is wise to follow the Apostle's advice to be swift to hear and slow to to speak. It is easy to say things that we regret after calm thought. Not many of you know how the curse of intemperance overshadowed my youth. That I might escape, I fled from my early surroundings. For what I am, I am indebted under the say things which afterwards we wish had never been said at all or said with more calmness and moderation. The remedy for this is slowness to speak, calm thought before rather than after speaking. It is not always wise to say just what we believe nor as positively as we believe. (N. Y. Advocate.)
